

IT For Humanity Touch Typing Lessons

Version 1

Touch Typing is the ability to type on a keyboard without looking at the keyboard. It is a very useful skill. It lets you type very fast, because you don't have to look back and forth between the keyboard and the paper you are copying. You can just look at the paper and type like a machine gun. You can even type with your eyes closed.

It can give you an office job as an encoder, or if you speak good English, you can even work as a call center agent. Almost all office work nowadays requires the use of computers, and good typing skills are the foundation for many of them.

When taking these lessons, make sure that you position your fingers correctly. The left pointing finger or forefinger must be on the letter F, and the right forefinger must be at the letter J. Always use the right fingers for the right keys.

Relax and believe in your fingers. Do not be nervous. Believe that they know which key to press. This is very important.

Do not rest your wrists on the keyboard – raise them so you can move your hands slightly up and down the keyboard.

Practice a lot. Do not be lazy.

Rest when necessary, do not overwork. Typing for long periods of time can cause a painful disease of the wrist, called carpal tunnel syndrome.

Left hand:

Forefinger: F, G, R, T, V, B

Middle finger: D, E, C

Ring finger: S, W, X

Little finger: A, Q, Z

Thumb: space

Right hand:

Forefinger: J, H, U, Y, N, M

Middle finger: K, I, comma

Ring finger: L, O, .

Little finger: colon (:), quote ('), P, question mark (?)

Thumb: space
